

What On Earth? Review

by Brit Elders for Kinetics Magazine, August 2009 Issue

"Suzanne Taylor takes you on her 15-year personal journey to uncover the truth and meaning of the intricate designs that turn up in farmers' fields overnight. What on Earth records her interaction with philosophers, scientists, artists and farmers who share her passion for uncovering the enigma of the magnificent circles.

Examining the difference between manmade circles and those of unidentified origin satisfies the analytical mind while first hand accounts and circle-chasing sparks the sense of adventure and opens the mind's inquisitive need to answer an unanswerable question... where do these come from?

Suzanne not only explores the mythical and the magical beauty but also engages in intelligent speculation with other 'croppies' about the source and meaning of the elaborate designs of the world's crop circles.

This is a must have documentary that will leave you wanting to catch the next flight to England for a first hand experience with crop circles."
